Japanese Gulch

Japanese Gulch is an area that runs between Mukilteo and Everett, Washington. The area is known for its rich cultural heritage as well as its dense forested areas and wonderful woodland views.

Location

Japanese Gulch is located in the northeast portion of Mukilteo, Washington creating a boarder between Mukilteo and Everett. Nestled between suburban communities, Japanese Gulch expands southward as it travels inland from Puget Sound.

There are two different parts of the Japanese Gulch, each accessed from different trail heads.

The lower gulch is accessed off Mukilteo Lane and again on the north side of 5th Street. The upper gulch is accessed on the south side of 5th Street just west of the lower gulch trail head.

Trails & Amenities

Trails:

Japanese Gulch offers miles of trails for walkers and hikers alike. Walk on the nicely manicured paths of the lower gulch or investigate some of the more “rugged” trails in the upper gulch. There is fun available for every experience level.

Amenities:

The Japanese Gulch offers something for everyone to enjoy complete with wide trails, benches, and in the near future, picnic areas and viewpoints. Along with the trails visitor can enjoy the sounds of babbling streams and the scenes of a thriving ecosystem.

And for dog lovers, the city will be constructing an off leash dog park right off 5th Street (next to the upper gulch trail head), within the next year.
